

Asher Yadlin arrested after renewed police questioning Elison, Yadlin's ex-lawyer also held

By ARTHUR KEMELMAN, Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV.—Asher Yadlin, the man whom the Cabinet nominated on September 5 as the next Governor of the Bank of Israel, will be brought before a Tel Aviv magistrate this morning when the police will ask for an extension of his remand. Yadlin, the head of the Kupat Holim, was arrested last night at the end of an intensive investigation which was conducted in the full glare of publicity for more than a week. Arrested along with Yadlin was Mordechai Elison, a key figure in the sale of the Tel Baruch medical centre.

ASHER YADLIN

The third man arrested was attorney Shlomo Guri, who represented Yadlin in the purchase of an apartment on which it is suspected that the land betterment tax was evaded through a false declaration. Yadlin was arrested after a full day of interrogation. During the day, police armed with search warrants, seized a number of documents including bank statements from his office and home.

A fourth figure, another lawyer, connected with the medical centre transaction, was under questioning until late last night. There is a possibility that he may also be arrested.

The police spokesman told The Post last night that Yadlin had been arrested "in connection with the affairs included in the Attorney-General's report which was presented to the Cabinet on Sunday."

Yadlin came under investigation for allegedly earning material benefits from various land deals while in his present job as director-general of Kupat Holim.

Elison is suspected of receiving money under false pretences on behalf of someone else in connection with the sale of the Kupat Holim medical centre at Tel Baruch. He is also suspected of preparing false statements about the company which he at present heads. Searches were also carried out at Elison's residence in Haifa.

The arrest of Elison and Yadlin is the culmination of an investigation that began so quietly that members of the Government were not even aware that the man they had appointed Governor of the Bank of Israel was under suspicion.

In the last two weeks, what was at first officially referred to as a "check" became a full-fledged investigation. The last week saw Yadlin being questioned by the police from the early hours of the morning until late at night.

Newspaper reports last week suggested that there were grounds for suspicion against Yadlin, confirmed by Sunday's report by Attorney-General Shimon Peres, but that police had nothing concrete on which to base their suspicions.

Events took a dramatic turn when Elison, who had been questioned previously, claimed that he had knowledge about two large business deals in Israel and abroad in which "public figures" were involved. If granted immunity from prosecution, he would have been willing to turn state's evidence.

Negotiations between Elison and Sussman, advisers to the Defence Minister Asher Ben-Natan and Aluf (Res.) Israel Tal, and member of the General Staff, Clements was accompanied by several principal assistants for the Middle East, and generals representing the U.S. armed forces. Prior to the meeting, Clements and U.S. Ambassador Malcolm X met with Peres and two aides for a closed discussion on arms policy.

Clements made it clear both on his arrival and in his statements at the Defence Ministry meeting that there was no conflict of interests between the needs of the American armed forces and military supplies to Israel. Clements is reported to have expressed his respect for Israel's defence achievements, and lauded the cooperation between Israel and the U.S.

Meanwhile, there was some consternation yesterday concerning Defence Minister Peres' statement to the Cabinet on Sunday that his Ministry had $200m. available to help finance the arms made available by President Ford. Observers, however, saw the statement as a ploy aimed at hastening the supply of the weapons to Israel without allowing the lack of budget to be used as a possible delaying tactic.

This morning, Clements will meet with Prime Minister Rabin, and will then tour the Golan Heights with the Chief of Staff. He will leave Israel for Saudi Arabia tomorrow morning.

Quick move on governor not expected

By GIDION ESHET
Jerusalem Post Reporter

No immediate action is likely to be taken on the appointment of a new governor for the Bank of Israel following last night's arrest of Asher Yadlin. This evaluation was shared late last night by Government sources in Jerusalem.

It was clear from the Attorney-General's report submitted to the Cabinet on Sunday that Yadlin would not be the next governor, the sources explained. The main reason for this was that the investigation would not end by October 31, when a new governor would have to be appointed.

The two-week delay decided on by the Cabinet was regarded at the time as an act of grace towards Yadlin, telling him: "You have two weeks to clear yourself. If you don't succeed, we will be obliged by law to appoint someone else."

The talks on a new nominee probably will begin only at the weekend. At that time, two prominently mentioned candidates will be in Israel — Dr. Zvi Sussman, who returned to Israel late last night after spending a year with the International Monetary Fund, and Arnon Gafni, director-general of the Finance Ministry, who will return tomorrow, together with present governor Moshe Sarban, from the IMF/World Bank conference in Manila.

MK Adi Amichai has also been mentioned recently as a possible nominee for the governorship.

Minister of Health Victor Shemtov told The Post that the arrest of Asher Yadlin in no way changes the situation. In the Cabinet meeting on Sunday, Shemtov, Housing Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz fought for a delay, suggesting the appointment of a deputy governor and refraining from appointing a governor for three months. At the meeting, the Attorney-General said that suggestion was not legal.

Political reporter Joshua Brillant adds:

The chairman of the Likud Executive, MK Simha Ehrlich, said last night Yadlin should not be appointed governor of Bank of Israel, even if he turns out to be innocent.

"A governor should be without any blemishes," Ehrlich told The Post. He added that the governor could not be someone who had stood trial.

The Likud leader advised the Government to nominate a new governor at its next meeting, on Sunday. An early appointment is necessary, so the new governor will have at least a few days to familiarize himself with the Bank of Israel's operation before he assumes responsibility, Ehrlich added.

The third figure arrested last night was Shlomo Guri, who represented Yadlin in connection with a Bat Yam flat which was bought by Yadlin but registered in the name of Hava Ehrlichman. When the flat was sold, Mrs. Ehrlichman claimed that the property was her sole place of residence, which had the effect of exempting the transaction from land betterment tax.

Yadlin received an IL50,000 profit from the deal, part of which he gave to the "anonymous woman."

According to the police, another individual, a lawyer, has been under questioning all evening and may possibly be arrested during the night. It is believed that this lawyer played an instrumental part in the Tel Baruch medical centre transactions.

Police will today ask the Magistrate's Court here for a 15-day remand for each.

Earlier in the day, Tel Aviv Magistrate Arye Erenart extended for one day — the remand of Kupat Holim chief accountant Meir Kimhi, who was until yesterday the only person being held in the Yadlin affair. During the hearing, police investigator Reuven Weinstein refused to answer when asked by Kimhi's attorney whether Yadlin had been arrested. But Rav-Pakad Weinstein did agree to write out for the judge the names of the other persons arrested.

Bleeding profusely, says Yadlin's deputy

"We are bleeding profusely but we shall overcome this," Professor Haim Doron, Kupat Holim deputy director, made this statement in a televised interview on the Yadlin affair.

He added that the planned steps for the election of a new Kupat Holim chairman had been frozen for the time being.

Arms list is 'not exotic' — Aviation Week

Jerusalem Post Correspondent
WASHINGTON. — The recently announced U.S. sale of weapons to Israel, "is not as exotic" as originally reported, according to "Aviation Week and Space Technology."

The magazine listed among the items approved for sale to Israel by the U.S. "a follow-on Vietnam war-vintage fuel-air explosive anti-personnel bombs, the Westinghouse pave spike pod-mounted target designator system for laser-guided ordinance, and a thermal night-vision for the Hughes tow anti-aircraft missile."

According to the report, the night-vision system is currently being developed by Texas Instruments for the U.S. Army for use on the ground, and a "modest version" of it is slated for Israel. This "modest version," the magazine said, is a forward-looking infra-red sensor, with a narrow field of view and low resolution when compared with aircraft systems.

The magazine said that the list had been promised to Israel a year ago, when Israel "submitted a short shopping list of weapon needs to the White House."

UK invites Sithole to Rhodesia talks

LONDON. — Britain yesterday invited the Rev. Ndabingi Sithole, militant founder of the Zimbabwe African National Union (Zanu), to the Geneva conference on Rhodesia's constitutional future.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the invitation to Sithole was being conveyed to him through the British High Commission in Dar-es-Salaam.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland originally omitted Sithole from the group of black Rhodesian leaders invited to the conference due to begin on October 28.

Sithole will join the Zanu secretary-general, Robert Mugabe, the head of the rival Zimbabwe African Peoples' Union (Zapu), Joshua Nkomo and the leader of the African National Congress, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, for the showdown with the white Rhodesian delegation headed by Premier Ian Smith.

In Salisbury, on Sunday, Nkomo demanded that Britain send Crosland to chair the forthcoming conference.

Nkomo made the demand in a speech before some 6,000 black supporters of his wing of the African National Congress.

The conference is to be held under the chairmanship of British UN ambassador Ivor Richards.

British Government sources pointed out Richards, being free of any political connections, was considered the best suited for the task although Crosland had left the option open to go to Geneva in the latter stages of the conference — if necessary.

Nkomo spoke before flying to Nairobi, Kenya, for talks with President Jomo Kenyatta. Later this week, he travels to Soviet-backed Somalia to meet President Siad Barre. (UPI)

Yadlin summit calls for cease-fire, 1,000-man peace-keeping force

By NAN SAFADI
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

On Arab summit, last night, the three-day parley with a call for a final Lebanon's 18-month pledge to dispatch a joint Arab force to protect the country.

Arabian summit was the heads of state of Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, as well as by the Palestine Liberation Organization, issued by the summit, further enforce a 1969 Cairo pact which restricts the PLO's Lebanon. The communiqué noted that this force be implemented in a period commencing on a cease-fire went.

unique said that the Arab "peace-keeping" force be placed under the command of Lebanon's Elias Sarkis, who maintains the right to Arab force's mission on his own security.

unique made no mention of a Syrian expeditionary force from Lebanon, demanded as a cease-fire by the PLO's left-Syrian troops were from the backbones of the new joint Arab force, designed to impose a truce between Lebanon's warring factions: the Syrian Christian militias on the one side and PLO-leftist forces, which include Israeli and Libyan "volunteers," on the other.

The communiqué contained many ambiguities, especially with regard to the prospects of implementing the peace plans on Lebanon's battle-ground. The communiqué said that the Riyadh resolutions would be deferred to an over-all pan-Arab summit, including all Arab heads of state in Cairo next Monday.

The most evident achievement of the Riyadh parley was the reconciliation of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and his Syrian counterpart Hafez Assad, whose rift over last year's Sinai interim accord was accelerated by the Lebanese strife. Syria had supported rightist Christians and conservative Muslims in the Lebanese war, while Egypt backed the PLO-leftist camp.

Sadat said yesterday that his rapprochement with Assad had dashed the hopes of their enemies "who thought the differences between us were those of substance. We did not, and we will not lose the unity manifested in the glorious October (Yom Kippur) war," he said, while announcing that Egypt and Syria would normalize their relations.

The revival of Egyptian-Syrian cooperation which was shattered by the 1975 Sinai interim accord, could pose difficulties for Israel in the long run if not in the immediate future, as could the decision to station a well-equipped, 80,000-strong "deterrent" Arab force in Lebanon, and the possible renewal of the PLO's sabotage activity from there under its patronage.

Fighting between PLO-leftists and Christians yesterday was reported from various Lebanese battlefronts, mainly in Beirut and the south. Christians last night were reported to have entered the garrisoned southern town of Marjayoun, which the PLO has been using as a main stronghold. Southern Lebanese have pledged to keep the PLO out of their region, which neighbours Israel.

Egypt FM to Moscow

POST Middle East Affairs Correspondent

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy is to visit Moscow next week. Cairo's semi-official daily "Al-Ahram," reported yesterday. The nature of Fahmy's mission was not disclosed.

Observers saw three possible reasons for Fahmy's trip: Egypt's quest to settle the issue of rescheduling its huge debts to Moscow; discussion of Moscow's recent call for reconvening the Geneva Middle East conference; and exploration of the possibility of resuming large-scale Soviet shipments of arms and spare parts to Egypt.

Reports from Cairo yesterday said that the U.S. ambassador to Cairo, Herman Eilts, had left for Washington for consultations at the State Department. "Al-Ahram" said that Eilts would convey to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger an Egyptian protest at President Ford's recent decision to supply Israel with sophisticated American arms.

'Syrian trainees quit Russia'

PARIS. — All Syrian trainee officers studying in Soviet military academies have been withdrawn and have left the Soviet Union, the weekly "Le Point" reported yesterday.

The magazine says that this came about as a result of the strained Soviet-Syrian relations. It said that earlier this year several hundred Syrians were attending courses at Soviet military academies and were training at flight schools and various technical institutions. (JTA)

Clements: Arms may take three years to arrive

By HURSH GOODMAN
Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent

Israel defence officials and their American counterparts here met with visiting U.S. Deputy Defence Secretary William Clements for several hours yesterday evening to discuss Israel's arms purchasing policy over the coming years. The meeting was described last night as cordial and useful.

Undoubtedly also under discussion was the delivery timetable of the items promised Israel by President Ford last week. On his arrival here from Tunisia yesterday afternoon, Clements indicated that some of the items under discussion could take as long as three years to arrive.

Three of the four systems Israel will receive, according to U.S. news reports, include Helix anti-tank missiles which have not yet gone into service with the U.S. Army, the FLIR intra-red detection system which is adaptable for both tanks and aircraft, and air-launched cluster bombs for the destruction of entrenched forces. The order is also said to include 120 M-60 tanks, the first of which are scheduled for early arrival.

Clements last night heard a detailed briefing from Defence Minister Shimon Peres on the political situation in the region, followed by an Israeli view of the balance of power in the area from Chief of Staff Mordechai Gur. Other Israeli officials at the meeting were the director-general of the Defence Ministry, Professor Pinhas

Sussman, advisers to the Defence Minister Asher Ben-Natan and Aluf (Res.) Israel Tal, and member of the General Staff, Clements was accompanied by several principal assistants for the Middle East, and generals representing the U.S. armed forces. ## Mao's widow accused of trying to kill Chairman on his deathbed PEKING. — A wall poster in Peking has accused Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, Chiang Ching, of trying to murder her husband. The poster, pasted up on the campus of Peking University, charges that she personally tried to kill Mao on his deathbed and revealed that a top-level row broke out over what should be done with his body.

Several hundred officially-inspired posters attacking Chiang Ching and three of her radical colleagues have been penned by staff and students at the university. All are understood to be based on texts and documents made available by the university Communist party authorities.

The text of one, written on Sunday by physics students, gives a dramatic version of the events surrounding Mao's death on September 9.

"When Chairman Mao was gravely ill Chiang Ching did not care. When Chairman Mao's illness reached its crisis, Chiang Ching disregarded opposition and obstacles from the doctor and insisted on moving Chairman Mao in a vain attempt to kill him," the students wrote.

The big pink poster described Madame Mao and her supporters — vice-party chairman Wang Hung-wen, vice-premier Chang Chun-chiao and top political ideologue Yao Wen-yuan — as "the gang of four."

They are understood to have been placed under house arrest on October 7.

It added: "In the days following Mao's death, wherever you looked all were sunk in grief: 800 million people sincerely hoped to preserve Mao's body so that generation upon generation might look upon his face. But this gang of four strictly opposed the preserving of the Chairman's body."

There was a mysterious four-week silence following Mao's death without an announcement of what would be done with his body. Not until October 9 was it announced Mao's remains would be embalmed in a mausoleum like those of other Communist giants.

The poster, headed, "The towering crimes of the gang of four," said the students were delighted when they heard news that Premier Hua Kuo-feng, Mao's successor as party Chairman and the Central Committee, had adopted "decisive and resolute measures" against the rebel leftists — presumably their arrests.

It described the four as "a dangerous cancer" which had long plotted to take over the Chinese leadership. "When Chairman Mao was alive they had already formed a clique and were intriguing, plotting and stretching out their reactionary tentacles. They wanted to twist the party and seize power... they vainly thought they would be the masters of China after Mao's death," it said.

U.S. grain deal put off

Jerusalem Post Staff
TEL AVIV. — Commerce Minister Haim Bar-Lev has postponed his planned trip to the U.S. to sign an agreement on the sale of American surplus grain to Israel.

The director of government trading at the Commerce Ministry, Oded Erez, said the postponement would not cause any hardship in Israel. He said one of the reasons the trip was postponed was the resignation of U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz and the failure of his replacement to initial the agreement.

Agriculture Ministry sources told The Jerusalem Post that, following the recent uproar over the newest arms deal with the U.S., Bar-Lev is waiting until after the U.S. elections so that the grain deal will not appear an American campaign gimmick. The sources stressed that the deal is for the U.S. to sell surplus grain (if it has a surplus next year) at the going market price. Similar deals have been signed by the U.S. with the USSR and Poland.

Portugal minister says visit is 'a first step'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Portuguese Minister of Agriculture, Antonio Lopes Cardoso, said yesterday that his visit to Israel — the first by any minister from his country — was "a first step in the process of normalization of relations between Portugal and Israel which our leaders announced this year." Cardoso said this after emerging from a 90-minute conversation with Prof. Shlomo Avineri, Director-General of the Foreign Ministry.

Antonio Lopes Cardoso

In the conversation, the Portuguese Minister said his country respected and recognized Israel's right to exist in peace and security. His government had dissociated itself from the stand of the previous government, with regard to support for the Arab campaign against Israel at the UN last week, and the vote condemning Zionism as a form of racism.

The two men agreed that plans would be worked out for technical cooperation and increased trade between Israel and Portugal, as part of the process of normalization.

However, they did not go into details, some of which may be worked out in Cardoso's talks with Agriculture Minister Aharon Uzan and his senior officials later.

(When Cardoso left Lisbon en route for Israel, he told reporters that one of the aims of his visit was to study the system of agricultural cooperatives, a field in which he believed Israel had much to teach others.)

A reporter from the Portuguese State Radio came to Israel with the minister, who is also accompanied by his wife, Maria Fernanda Cardoso, head of the ruling Socialist Party's agricultural section. A Socialist member of Parliament, Eras Pinho, is also in the minister's entourage. Two delegations of Portuguese journalists will be visiting Israel in November and in December.

Earlier yesterday in a conversation with Uzan, Cardoso hinted that he would request assistance from Israel in the spheres of agricultural and water planning. He said he had heard a great deal about the work of Israel experts, particularly in Leticia Amestoy. He may go into detail today when he lunches with Uzan at his home in Moshav Gilat in the Negev.

In the coming months Portugal is expected to raise the possibility of opening a consulate-general here, to parallel the Israel Consulate-General in Lisbon.

Speaking at a dinner given in his honour by Prof. Avineri at the Jerusalem Plaza Hotel, Cardoso said he hoped that rapid steps would soon be taken to give further expression to the process of normalization. He said that the people of Portugal who had fought for their own freedom cannot be indifferent to the battle of a small nation like Israel, and that the Portuguese government recognizes the fact of Israel's existence and hopes that peaceful solution in the Middle East will soon be found which would recognize the rights of peoples in the region.

Partial accord with doctors

Jerusalem Post Staff

TEL AVIV. — The country's 2,200 hospital doctors and their employers reached agreement yesterday evening over one of their main outstanding differences — the payment for a round-the-clock duty shift.

Under the agreement the doctors will work a 32-hour duty shift, starting at 8 a.m., going through the night, and ending at 4 p.m. the following day — instead of a 28-hour one starting from 8 a.m. For these 32 hours they will get IL400 — four days' pay at 1976 rates — instead of the IL267 they got previously.

The other major item in the shift part of the negotiations — the amount to be paid doctors who are on emergency call at home — will be discussed at a meeting here this morning between the hospital doctors' committee and their employers.

This meeting, set to begin at 8 a.m., will also take up the doctors' 12 salary demands. These include a demand for upgrading of all hospital doctors by two grades, special pay for senior doctors doing administrative work, and larger telephone and car allowances.

Agreement has already been reached to add another 1,000 hospital doctors to the present 2,200 over the next three years.

Aloni suggests cut in milk production

By YITZHAK OKED

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — MK Shulamit Aloni yesterday proposed that some of Israel's "hot" milk cows be slaughtered when she said that farmers should produce 200 million litres less per year and the Government should cut the subsidies on milk by 50 agorot per litre, thus saving the country IL300m.

According to her Citizens Rights Movement, Israel this year will need about 535 million litres of milk, but Tnuva claims that it will need 650 million litres. CRM suggests importing cheap powdered milk from Europe to make up the amount of milk Israel will be short because of the proposed cut in production.

Among the speakers at a press conference were Dr. Yakir Klesner, an economist from the Hebrew University's Faculty of Agriculture; Moshe Eitgar, of Moshav Beit Lehem Haglit; Yona Nadkin of Moshav Nahalal and CRM member Shlomo Groll.

The speakers claimed that Israel drinks only about one-third of its production, and the other two-thirds are used to make dairy products. They claimed that the dairy products could be made from cheap imported powdered milk which could be bought for about 70 agorot per litre.

The speakers also claimed that 2,000 small milk farms that have an average of about 20 cows each are not profitable. They should be abolished, and the farmers be given aid to produce something more profitable for them and for the country, they said.

Yitzhak Landman, director of Tnuva, told The Jerusalem Post through his spokesman that Shulamit Aloni should try to persuade the Common Market to open its markets for Israeli dairy products.

Shulamit Aloni takes on Tnuva yesterday at a press conference in which she urged cutting milk production. (Simonsky, Israel Sun)

Instead of proposing to ruin the country's milk industry.

Landman explained that milk and milk products cost in Europe about the same as they do in Israel; but because of the EEC's huge surpluses, they are willing to sell outside the Common Market at "dumping" prices.

Landman added that the milk surplus in Europe today is only temporary and the prices can start rising soon, but it could take years for Israel to develop its milk production again.

At the conference it also was pointed out that Israel is producing about 3,000 tons of butter per year, when it actually consumes only 1,000 tons per year. Landman explained that the main reason for this gap was the high price of butter; but since the price was lowered by about 40 per cent, consumption has increased by about 50 per cent.

Bension loses appeal against bankruptcy

The Supreme Court yesterday rejected an appeal by former Israeli-British Bank manager Yehoshua Bension, now serving a 12-year term for stealing $47m. of bank clients' money, against a declaration of bankruptcy. The declaration, upheld earlier by the Tel Aviv District Court, was issued because of Bension's failure to pay a $25m. fine imposed last year in addition to the prison sentence.

The bankruptcy order was reportedly issued to enable the State to liquidate private assets belonging to Bension, which it could not previously touch, and to recover some of the money he stole while running the bank into the ground.

The Supreme Court rejected as "illogical" Bension's objections that the State had already taken steps to levy the fine by attaching his property. It has not yet ruled on his application to be released from prison, where the 52-year-old Bension says his life is in danger because of ill health. (Him)

Danish Religious Affairs Minister Jorgen Peter Hansen (left), accompanied by Danish Ambassador Sven Ebbesen, visiting Yad Vashem in Jerusalem yesterday. ## Histadrut body won't press charges against Peretz group

By YITZHAK OKED

Jerusalem Post Reporter

ASHDOD. — The Histadrut's Control Committee yesterday cleared Ashdod Port dockers' works committee members who served from May 1971 to December 1975, of having committed criminal offences which would justify a police investigation.

An investigation committee of the Ashdod Labour Council in June levelled charges against the committee members — headed by former port workers' leader Yehoshua Peretz — advising police to look into the "immoral and inadequate" handling of IL1m in dockers' union dues. The committee members appealed the charges to the Histadrut body.

The Histadrut Control Committee said it was being lenient with the committee members because it could not find sufficient grounds to call in the police, thus committee members were given the benefit of the doubt.

However, the works committee was reprimanded for not having kept proper books on committee money.

The only sanctions that the Histadrut Control Committee imposed was that persons who served on the works committees during the period investigated will not be permitted to serve on the committee for the next two years. Since six of the 11 present committee members are in this group (Peretz resigned before the investigation committee filed its report in June), the local labour council was asked to hold immediate elections for the dockers' committee.

Raphael Cohen, secretary of the Labour Council, told The Jerusalem Post that he hopes elections will be held in about three weeks. Work of the committee has been at a standstill since the investigation started.

The report by the Histadrut Control Committee said that it was improper for the works committee to have opened a separate bank account with IL100,000 workers' money, whatever the reason for the account.

According to the report, the works committee wrote a cheque of IL5,534 to a "Harif Fund," and this cheque was later cashed by three works committee members. The cash was then given to Rabbi Haim Pinto, who is chairman of the Harif Fund. The report could not understand why the committee members acted in this way, since the Harif Fund is a legal body and there was no need to cash the cheque.

Sa'adia Deri, one of the committee members under Peretz (Peretz was not available for comment), told The Post that the findings were not entirely fair towards them, especially the sanctions on committee membership.

Elie Maman, the dockers' works committee chairman who heads the opposition group and who was one of the forces behind the opening of the investigation, said that Peretz's group came out of the affair unscathed. Maman said he will discuss the matter with his lawyer, and is keeping open the option of going to the police with the material he has on the former committee.

Haifa students plan to strike on Sunday

Jerusalem Post Staff

HAIFA. — Haifa University and Technion students who have rejected the tuition agreement reached last week by the National Student Union and the Education Ministry, are preparing to strike when the academic year opens on Sunday.

The student unions of the two universities who assert that the agreement does not reflect the "principles" for which they have been fighting, said they would demonstrate on Haifa's main street next Monday, and later march outside the Knesset in Jerusalem.

The agreement, negotiated by Education Minister Aharon Yadin and National Student Union chairman Doby Bergman last week, provides a IL700 discount in the IL4,933 tuition for a large part of the student population; the establishment of a joint committee, with student representation, to draft criteria for the discounts; ministry publication of full information about IL75m. in available scholarships; another joint committee to study a graded tuition scheme for the 1977/78 academic year; and the acceptance by both sides of compulsory arbitration.

Criteria mentioned as possible for the tuition discounts include family and economic conditions, army service and participations in volunteer service projects. The volunteer service provision has been criticized as unfair by MK Esther Herlitz (Alignment) of the Volunteer Service Centre, and country's Arab students, many of whom attend Haifa University — would not be eligible for any discount based on army service, since the vast majority do not serve.

The head of the Haifa University Student Association, Yosi Speter, told The Post yesterday that the pact should also include a study of the universities' academic and administrative inefficiency, the possibility of a semester system, and firm criteria for setting tuition.

"The agreement which was signed, may help 15,000 students next year," Speter said, "but next year the problem will be much worse." He also objected to the fact that the agreement does not state "when the committee will start work on setting up graded tuition."

Students at the other universities, Speter asserted, are "waking up from their sweet illusions" and may follow Haifa's example in rejecting the agreement.

National Student Union chief Bergman, responding yesterday to Speter's charges, says it is the Haifa students who are living on illusions. "The principles that we have been fighting for have not been abandoned," he said. "There is now a proposal before the Knesset for a higher education planning bill, and we will appear before the education committee and continue to fight for our principles."

The Haifa students have no one to talk to about their grievances. The Education Ministry has refused to meet with them, and the presidents of the Technion and Haifa University are abroad.

Spassky in come for chess me

By ELIAHU SHAR

Jerusalem Post Chess Column
HAIFA. — Former champion Boris Spassky, accepted an invitation from Chess Olympiad organizers to participate in the opening here on Sunday in the presence of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

In a letter to The Jerusalem Post, Spassky said he "agreed" to come "provided" "procedural problems" were ironed out.

Spassky is apparently to gain permission to visit from the Soviet government. The USSR and the East countries have notified their intention to boycott national contests, in which representing 51 countries participate.

Two other chessmen of international renown, American Fischer and former Soviet master Viktor Korchnoi, have been invited to lend their names to the olympiad, but no return has been received from either by last night.

It was learned, however, that Korchnoi's arrival was more in the realm of a "chess tour" than Fischer's. Korchnoi is to coach the Dutch team. Twenty-four of the team in the contests are all-women.

Israel Radio will present a 15-minute roundup of the event on Sunday morning. The closing ceremony will be broadcast on Sunday. First Programme at 11 will include commentary views with contest participants.

Perez drives in winning run as Reds nip Yanks

CINCINNATI — Tony Perez, one of baseball's finest clutch hitters, delivered a two-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning Sunday night, driving home Ken Griffey with Cincinnati's winning run as the Reds nipped the New York Yankees 4-3 to take the second game of the 1976 World Series.

The victory gave the Reds a 2-0 edge in the best-of-seven series, which continues tonight in New York.

Perez, who has driven in 90 or more runs for 10 consecutive seasons, drilled catcher Hunter's first pitch on a line to left field. Griffey, who had reached second base on a throwing error by shortstop Fred Stanley, easily beat the throw home by left-fielder Roy White.

With two out in the ninth, Griffey — hitless in the series — had tapped a slow roller to Stanley. The Yankees shortstop charged the ball and, in his haste to catch the speedy runner, fired it into the Cincinnati dugout. Yankees manager Billy Martin ordered Joe Morgan walked intentionally, so that Hunter, a right-hander, could face the right-handed Perez.

The veteran Reds' cleanup hitter wasted no time, ripping his hit to left field and sending home a capable. Cincinnati Stadium covered 94,816, which had sat through frigid 40-degree weather to watch the first Sunday night game in World Series history.

Jack Billingham, who relieved Reds' starter Fred Norman in the seventh inning, was the winning pitcher.

Steelers whip Bengals, start comeback road

NEW YORK — The two-time Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers began the long, hard road back to playoff contention Sunday with a 23-6 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals — and it took rookie quarterback Mike Kruczek proved one thing, he proved he knows how to lead.

Kruczek, playing for the injured Terry Bradshaw, handed the pigskin to running back Franco Harris, 41 times, a National Football League record. Harris gained 143 yards, including a two one-yard touchdown run, and pushed his career total to 4,485 yards.

The victory broke a three-game Steelers losing streak, giving Pittsburgh a 2-4 record, and closed up the race in the American Conference Central Division. Cincinnati, 4-2, shares the division lead with Houston.

New Mt. Carmel hospital opens today

HAIFA — Seven years after construction work began, the 400-bed Kupat Holim hospital on Mt. Carmel today will admit its first patients. The staff of 600 includes 100 doctors and 300 nurses, among them the personnel of the old Kupat Holim hospital nearby, which will continue to house various medical services of the sick fund. Operating budget of the institution will be at least IL$6m. a year.

Kupat Holim said last March that construction and equipment would cost IL$25m. Subsequently, the Lady Davis Fund reportedly contributed $5m. towards the purchase of medical equipment, and the institution was given the name "Lady Davis Hospital."

During the sixties, work was delayed when area residents took legal action in an attempt to halt construction of the large hospital in a quiet residential area with inadequate roads. (The municipality spent IL$1m. to widen the roads for better access to the hospital.) Work began only in 1969, after the neighbours lost the case against the Kupat Holim project, which had the backing of then-Mayor Abba Khushy.

The building was designed by architect Ya'acov Rechter and put up by Solal Boneh.

The hospital services will be coordinated with others in the city. Kupat Holim stated yesterday. The medical director of the hospital is Dr. Maxin Sheinfeld, and the administrative manager is Zvi Presser.

6,500 subscriptions sold for Cameri Haifa 'season'

By YA'ACOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA — Tel Aviv's Cameri Theatre has sold 6,500 subscriptions for its three-play "season" at the City Theatre here, over two-thirds of the available seats, 7,000, Cameri general manager Uri Ofel told the press here on Sunday. Sales are continuing, and may reach 7,000, he said.

The first of the new season's three plays, "Egus," by Peter Shaffer, directed by Peter James, opened here last night. The other two plays to be staged in Haifa will be chosen from a list of four: Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar"; "Otherwise Engaged" by Simon Gray; "The Man on the Pole" by Nissim Aloni; or "Igor Bolichov" by Maxim Gorki.

The Cameri and the Haifa City Theatre have agreed to loan each other their stages for 35 performances. Ofel explained. The Haifa Theatre at first had objected to a Cameri subscription drive; but after intervention by the Ministry of Education and Culture, the two companies had reached an agreement.

The Cameri did remarkably well in Haifa last year, with most of its performances sold out. As a result, the Cameri became interested in a Haifa Subscription Programme.

Reductions for subscribers are substantial; a single-performance ticket, which would cost IL$30 or IL$25, is IL$20 or IL$15 to subscribers. Subscriptions are sold through the Shimon Garber ticket agency. Subscribers also get two vouchers for extra tickets at the same reduced price.

Each Cameri play will be performed up to 10 times at the City Theatre. If demand exceeds the 8,500 seats available, the Cameri may consider extra performances of its subscription plays at the Shavit Hall on Mt. Carmel, where it has staged its plays in the past. In addition to the subscription series, it will continue to stage other plays on its repertoire in Haifa.

"The Cameri plans to perform more often outside Tel Aviv. Not only in Jerusalem and Haifa, but also in the smaller towns, in the settlements and army camps," Ofel said. This called for technical facilities and "Omanut Le'am," (art for the people) the Government-backed organization, was helping to create.

The new allegations came as massive demonstrations continued in the city for the third successive day denouncing the four leftist leaders reportedly under arrest. Seven million were reported to have marched in Shanghai by yesterday.

Greater Shanghai has a population exceeding 12 million and is China's most important industrial centre. The leftist media has heaped praise on the Shanghai militia, which analysts speculated could be a weapon in any power struggle.

In the streets around the Shanghai police headquarters, slogans appeared supporting Hua. Most of the posters were signed by factory workers.

Private eyes hired to find 40 stolen Toras

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

A private detective agency has been hired by the "Committee for the Sanctity of Israel" to apprehend a suspected ring of Torah-scroll thieves, who have made off with at least 40 scrolls in the last two weeks.

Rabbi Shimon Torenheim, head of the committee, told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that he had offered IL$7,000 to a detective agency to retrieve the scrolls. He has also notified Interpol, in case any of them have been smuggled out of the country, and asked the international police network to notify suspicious officers of "cheap" Torah scrolls discovered by the agency.

Synagogue officials have opened their holy ark recently only to discover Torah scrolls missing. The hand-written parchment gone but the wooden rollers remaining. They have been reported to the police and to the committee, said Rabbi Torenheim, by men distraught and in tears. The monetary value of each scroll ranges from IL$70,000 to over IL$200,000 averaging about IL$100,000. It takes a scribe about a year to complete one Torah scroll. Torahs have been reported missing in Maaz Zion, the Kiryat Yovel quarter of Jerusalem, Nahariya and elsewhere. In some cases they were lent to synagogues by their members who handed over family heirlooms for use during Simhat Torah. The rabbi noted that the police are "pleased" that the committee is taking the initiative in catching the thieves, and that his group turned to a "private eye" because "the police have enough to do."

Following an emergency meeting of the committee, Rabbi Torenheim sent letters to officials of Israel's 8,000 synagogues and dealers in holy books, and asked them to report any suspicious offers of "cheap" Torah scrolls to install electronic burglar alarms on the doors of their buildings and take extra precautions against burglaries.

Asked how a thief could sell a stolen Torah, the rabbi suggested that "all he has to do is put on a kippa, take the parchment — minus the wooden handles — to a dealer or synagogue, and say he is a scribe who will sell it cheaply because he needs money." Not enough customers are suspicious of such offers, especially in such far-off places as Ar-sentina.

New drain pipes to prevent Holy Sepulchre floods

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Responding to a joint request from the Greek, Latin and Armenian Patriarchs of Jerusalem, the municipality began Sunday replacing sewerage and drainage pipes in the area of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, to prevent flooding in the coming winter.

Deputy Mayor Maron Benvenisti told The Jerusalem Post on Sunday that work got under way just three days after a special IL$2m. allocation was approved by Justice Minister Haim Zadok, chairman of the Interministerial Committee on Jerusalem. Zadok approved the allocation on the spot Thursday after municipal officials outlined the problem to him. The walls of the church have begun to drip in some places and there was fear of major leakage with this winter's rains.

An extensive infrastructure project which got under way in the Old City last winter has been continued so far principally to the area of the central marketplace of the Moslem Quarter. The new project launched on Sunday will affect much of the Christian Quarter.

Meanwhile, at a Municipal Council meeting on Sunday, Mayor Teddy Kolek said that 318 of the 600 apartments planned for the Jewish Quarter had been completed. Of these, 275 were occupied. Within a year, he said, 400 will be finished.

On another subject, Benvenisti told the council that 44 East Jerusalem residents had been sentenced to terms ranging from one to nine months for building violations during the past three years. Nine West Jerusalem residents had been given sentences of up to a month for similar offences. During this period there had been 330 building violations recorded in East Jerusalem and 125 in West Jerusalem.

Posters accuse Mao's widow

"Resolve to criticize and smash the four insects."

Chinese leftists were also accused yesterday of planning a military-style takeover in Shanghai as part of a plot to gain control of the country. Wallposters appearing in the country's largest city said that Ma Tien-hui, a top local administrator, had armed the million-strong militia in Shanghai and hoped to occupy the radio station, harbour and other key installations.

The new allegations came as massive demonstrations continued in the city for the third successive day denouncing the four leftist leaders reportedly under arrest. Seven million were reported to have marched in Shanghai by yesterday.

Greater Shanghai has a population exceeding 12 million and is China's most important industrial centre. The leftist media has heaped praise on the Shanghai militia, which analysts speculated could be a weapon in any power struggle.

Kosygin in surprise return after 87-day absence

MOSCOW. — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin reappeared in public yesterday following a mysterious 87-day absence marked by rumours of a stroke and his possible retirement.

Kosygin, 72, joined Party leader Leonid Brezhnev, President Nikolai Podgorny and other Soviet officials in a 20-minute airport ceremony welcoming a visiting delegation from Mongolia.

Wearing an overcoat and Astrakhan hat against the cold, Kosygin appeared in good condition as he strode briskly across the airport tarmac and laughed warmly with fellow members of the ruling Politburo. But the Soviet TV cameras that relayed the ceremony live from the airport focused mainly on Brezhnev and on Yumyagin Tsedenbal, first secretary of the Mongolian Party. Kosygin remained in the background, chatting animatedly.

Kosygin's surprise reappearance appeared to dash speculation that he had been incapacitated by a serious illness since he was last seen receiving an Algerian diplomatic delegation on July 22.

There has been some speculation that Kosygin, who is considered second in the Kremlin hierarchy, might be on the way out. Soviet sources had dropped word that he had suffered a heart attack or stroke while swimming or boating in the Moscow River, but had not disclosed the severity of the problem. Brezhnev had told former U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman during a visit last month that he expected Kosygin to return to his desk within a few weeks.

The speculation is that Kosygin might bow out later this month during a session of the Supreme Soviet (parliament) and an expected full meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee.

Rumours about his possible retirement began circulating when Nikolai Tikhonov, a deputy premier and associate of Brezhnev, was elevated to be the country's second first deputy premier. Diplomats concluded that Tikhonov, 71, could have been a possible replacement for Kosygin because of his experience in the economic field, the premier's personal specialty.

The mystery surrounding Kosygin's health was further intensified because the first annual session of the Supreme Soviet was not held as usual in the first half of the year. The meeting has now been set for October 27. Diplomats attach importance to the role Kosygin will play as the Supreme Soviet must approve the latest economic five-year plan. He could normally be expected to deliver a lengthy economic report to the meeting. Whether or not he does so will be taken as an indication of his health.

It said the initial voyage, at a small pace of one knot, could take from six to 12 months and cost about $80m.

The firm, Cicero, said it was contacted about a year ago by Saudi officials who wanted a fresh approach to their country's water shortage problems. Contract discussions are now in the final stage, Cicero officials said.

Cicero engineers worked out the iceberg plan in coordination with the French polar experts and are confident it will work. The firm's commercial director, Francois de Broglie, said for the trial run, five ocean-going tugs, each driven by 20,000 horsepower engines, would travel to the Antarctic where special crews would pick out a suitable iceberg.

The ideal one would have a more-or-less rectangular shape to prevent tipping, weigh about 100 million tons, be about 1.6 kms. long, 800 metres wide and 700 metres high, one-fortieth of which would be above water.

De Broglie said experts will fix an 18-inch thick special plastic cover over the iceberg, to protect it from the melting rays of the sun and the destructive force of waves and currents. Special cables will then be rigged between the iceberg and the tugs, and the trip will begin.

99% of East Germans vote for Communists

EAST BERLIN. — East Germans, in a virtually unanimous vote, have elected a new Volkskammer (parliament) made up entirely of Communist-approved candidates.

Strongly encouraged by some 700,000 roaming "election helpers," more than 99 per cent of the 12 million electorate turned out on Sunday despite cold wet weather. Of those, more than 99 per cent voted "yes" for the official — and only — candidates.

The 500-seat Volkskammer is little more than a rubber-stamp body which approves decisions taken by the ruling Socialist Unity (Communist) Party.

East Berliners, because of the city's special four-power status voted only for a new city council, which, in turn, will choose a further 88 deputies for the national Volkskammer.

The "election helpers" visited tardy voters continually at home until they went to vote. Some people who have declined to vote in the past say they were later ostracized at work.

'More votes than voters' in Manila

MANILA. — The first returns in the weekend referendum on whether President Ferdinand Marcos should extend the martial law rule imposed in 1972 showed more votes cast than voters registered.

The beginning of the official count of ballots by the Commission on Elections was shown on a national network. A clerk told Leonardo Perez, commission chairman, that "this referendum result does not reflect the number of voters," asserting that "in some precincts, the number of votes exceeds the number of voters."

Three Americans win Nobel science awards

STOCKHOLM. — Three Americans were named yesterday to receive the 1973 Nobel Prizes in physics and chemistry, giving the U.S. a clean sweep of the year's Nobel scientific awards.

Burton Richter of Stanford University and Samuel C.C. Ting of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology shared the physics award for "pioneering work in the discovery of a heavy elementary particle of a new kind."

The Royal Academy of Sciences awarded the chemistry prize to William N. Lipscomb of Harvard University for his studies "on the structure of boranes, illuminating problems of chemical bonding."

"This is one thing that never happens in most physicists' lifetimes," said Richter, 45, who got the news as he was waking up in Stanford, California. "I'm delighted, pleased and stunned and surprised."

Ting, 41, said in Geneva, where he has been working at the European Nuclear Research Centre: "I am obviously very, very happy," he said. "And that, yes, that is all," he added after some hesitation, then broke into hearty laughter.

Three students brought Lipscomb the news. "I was on the telephone, and they said 'Congratulations, you won the Nobel Prize,'" Lipscomb told an interviewer later. "I looked very closely to see whether they were kidding, and they looked very serious," he said, adding that he was "very pleased" with the award, but "I didn't have such an objective at all."

Each award carries prize money of $150,000. Richter and Ting, who worked independently of each other, will share that amount. The awards will be formally presented by King Carl XVI Gustav at a ceremony in Stockholm on December 10.

Last week, two American virologists, Baruch S. Blumberg of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and Carleton D. Gajdusek of the National Institute for Neurological Diseases, won the medicine prize, and economist Milton Friedman the prize in economics. The prize for literature is to be announced Thursday. The peace prize isn't being given this year.

Richter and Ting were cited for discoveries in the exploration of the smallest components of matter, smaller than atoms and their nuclei. Richter did his work at Stanford and Ting at the Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island.

The two men met at Stanford on November 11, 1974 and found that their two research teams had discovered the same elementary particle, called the "J particle." They published separate scientific reports on the discovery within a week of each other.

The Academy said Lipscomb, 56, was honoured primarily for his studies in the chemistry of "boranes," the now generally accepted name for boron hydrides, or the compounds of the element boron with hydrogen. Boranes are a little known field difficult to penetrate, the Academy said, but Lipscomb has been the leading figure in advances made there.

Richter was born in New York, was educated at MIT and went to Stanford in 1959.

Ting, 41, was born in the U.S. of Chinese parents and grew up in China. He went to the University of Michigan, when he was 20, then moved to Berkeley for research. He joined Columbia University in 1965, also worked in Germany and now divides his time between MIT and the Nuclear Centre in Geneva.

Lipscomb graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1941 and received a doctorate in chemistry in 1946 from the California Institute of Technology. He taught at the University of Minnesota before going to Harvard in 1959.

700 Soweto blacks riot after boy's funeral

JOHANNESBURG. — Police said yesterday calm had been restored in the black township of Soweto after 700 blacks went on a rampage on Sunday following the funeral of a 16-year-old boy who died in police detention.

General David Kriel, deputy commissioner of police in charge of riot control, said 600 to 700 black mourners at the Avalon cemetery marched to the city engineering department in the Zoned district. He said they forced their way past black municipal guards at the gates of the security fence surrounding the bus depot. The mob then seized 10 light vans and several trucks and drove through the fence.

Dumisani Mbatha, the boy whose funeral the crowd was attending had been missing from his home in Soweto since September 17, the day of anti-government riots in central Johannesburg and mass arrests by police.

A prison spokesman last week said the youth had become ill in jail and died on September 25 after being admitted to hospital. But Soweto sources said that student leaders did not believe Mbatha had died of natural causes.

Desert research a main purpose of Ben-Gurion U.

Desert settlement in Israel and around the world hinges on two main factors: a more detailed and extensive understanding of desert areas than is available at present, together with the development of technological and scientific tools and techniques to overcome the particular problems of desert settlements.

In 1973, following a Government decision, the University was given responsibility for establishing and maintaining an Institute for Desert Research. The Institute is located at Sde-Boker, some 30 miles south of Beersheba.

The Institute has gathered scientists from Israel and overseas to help establish the conditions for a desirable and productive desert habitat. Headed by Professor Amos Richmond, it is conducting a fascinating and far-ranging research programme. Nine projects are currently under way, all concerned with the exploration of, and adjustment to, the desert.

Meteorologists and geologists are seeking to augment the Negev's meagre water supply. Another team is focusing on solar energy conversion for multiple dwellings. Still another is probing the desert for increased food production.

Professor Richmond himself is engaged in an interesting experiment to raise algae, rich in protein, as a source of food first for animals and later for humans.

Other Institute programmes include environmental medicine, architecture and urban planning, and establishing desert parks, including a large Negev recreational and wildlife centre.

The idea of creating parks is important in the context of building a complete environment. "It is not enough," says Professor Richmond, "to produce adequate living conditions. We must endeavour to establish comfortable and pleasant surroundings as well, so necessary to relieve the silent and bare desert."

Some two-thirds of the earth's surface is considered arid. With most of the world's population congested in the remaining third, the work of the Desert Research Institute has great significance not only for Israel — but for other arid-zone countries as well.

Higher Education: The Key to Development

The quality of Israel's higher education today will shape the nation's economic growth and security in the years ahead. So says BGU President Yosef Tekoah in his "State of the University" report to the Board of Governors.

"Ben-Gurion University," states Israel's former Permanent Representative to the U.N., "endeavours to attain several national goals: the development of the Negev, the absorption of new immigrants, and the elimination of economic and educational gaps between Israel's diverse communities. In order to contribute to these nation-building goals we must succeed in our major aim: to preserve the University's high academic standards and to ensure its continuing growth."

The American Associates of Ben-Gurion University honoured its president, Aron Chalewich, at its Inaugural Dinner in New York on September 21.

Eight hundred people attended the affair at the Pierre Hotel where Mr. Chalewich was presented with the Ben-Gurion Negev Award for his numerous activities on behalf of the University. Participating in the ceremonies were the Hon. Haim Herzog, Israel's Ambassador to the U.N., University President Yosef Tekoah, Mr. Max Fisher, noted American civic leader, and

Ben-Gurion U. Medical School Specializes in Training GPs

The Ben-Gurion University Faculty of Medicine will begin its third year, specially designed to prepare students for careers in public and community medicine. Forty new students, making a total enrolment of 106 in the Medical School, will be taught by a curricula which stresses clinical training and primary care medicine.

Medical students are attached to practitioners in urban and rural clinics in the Negev from their time of entry into medical school until graduation. The purpose of the experimental programme, explains Professor Moshe Prywes, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, is to repair the maldistribution of physicians so that more medical graduates will opt for primary care medicine in developing communities instead of attaching themselves to the large academic medical centres, already over-staffed.

By educating medical students to become aware of community needs and by merging medical education with the health care delivery system, as done by the University Centre for Health Sciences, Professor Prywes believes Israel can escape the widespread crisis in the delivery of health care.

Facts about Ben-Gurion University

- The only university with all four faculties: Natural Sciences, Engineering, Humanities and Social Sciences, and Medicine.
- Nearly one-third of 4,500 students enrolment of Oriental Jewish students are from the Negev.
- The University operates a Pre-Academic Centre for the educationally disadvantaged — one of many programmes designed to bridge the gap between diverse communities.
- Over one-fourth of the academic staff is made up of new immigrants.
- BGU is situated on campuses: two in Beer Sheva, and the newest at Boker, containing the Desert Research Institute, the Ben-Gurion Institute and Archives.
- The University Centre for Health Sciences has a health care and medical delivery service throughout the entire Negev.
- The University's Research and Development Authority has been a major force in creating science-based industry in the Negev.

Alternative schooling

By LEA LEVAVI

but Paldi feels that a ratio of 50 per cent "better-off" to 40 per cent "disadvantaged" is important for upward integration of the weaker elements.

"I also wondered why parents agree to send their children to a school like this when it's rather out of fashion. From discussions, I find that many parents have had enough of artificial bagrut (matriculation) pressure and want their children to do something else as well in high school." There is a bagrut programme at Kfar Silver but the teachers try to keep the pressure within reasonable bounds and there is no stigma when a student transfers to a less difficult course of study such as partial bagrut or a government diploma.

Work on the school's farm is compulsory for all pupils, whether they are studying agriculture, technology (mechanics) or practical nursing. "We want to teach the students the value of work and the need for exactness and punctuality, such as the need to milk the cows on time and feed the chickens promptly and properly. We think the farm is a means to do that, though one of the questions we have to weigh in long-range planning is whether there might not nowadays be a better way than agriculture. After all, the kibbutzim earn more from industry than from agriculture."

Kfar Silver also includes a small American school, the Molly Goodman High School, which has 15 students this year. In other such institutions, efforts to mix Americans with Israelis, and particularly with "disadvantaged" local pupils, have failed. This one seems to have succeeded this year.

"The Israelis arrived before the Americans, and we took advantage of that fact to lay the groundwork and to explain the importance of having American students who come for a year and may decide to settle here. The job of absorbing them was given to our eleventh grade. The reception at the airport was really warm and friendly and on that first evening the students arranged a party for the Americans on their own initiative." Studies are separate because the American students, many of whom study here for one year and receive credit toward their high school diploma at home, are taught according to an American curriculum. However, all other activities are integrated. Americans and Israelis live together in the dormitories and despite the language barrier real friendships have developed.

A great deal of effort is put into extra-curricular activities, which include a variety of clubs, student government and other activities. "It's important for students to learn what a democratic society is and how it works. We want to give them more power to handle problems before the adults step in. The more they prove capable of handling, the more responsibility we will give them."

ARE ALL of these new ideas really necessary? Didn't people succeed in becoming educated when school was taught in a one-room schoolhouse by an old man with a rod? "If we're talking about non-selective education, we have to give every individual the opportunity to achieve his maximum. The point about special projects and other alternative techniques — and they are only techniques — is to motivate students by appealing to their interests. In many ways, 'new' concepts of individual and small group instruction go back to the Seder and gematria. We have just made it more complicated with modern terminology."

Paldi says that his youth does not present problems, even though some of his staff are old enough to be his parents. "I think the important thing is teamwork. Both here and in the army, my philosophy was always to involve people in what I, after all, was doing. Each of us and of all of us together."

Friend to Israel, little Malawi

By ZE'EV SCHUL

Jerusalem Post Reporter
A TOURIST PARADISE still waiting to be discovered. That's Malawi, which is also the only black African nation to maintain full diplomatic relations with Israel.

The country straddles the very end of the Afro-Asian rift which extends from the foothills of Mount Hermon to those of the central Malawi massif. The St. Peter's fish that abound in the Kinneret are likewise plentiful in Lake Malawi, along with hippos and a few crocodiles.

Although some Malawis are devout Christians, for most of its people Israel, and especially Jerusalem, is a hard-to-believe-in place floating somewhere half-way to heaven. For others, especially the growing number of secondary school and university graduates, Israel is the country which came to its aid after Malawi (then Nyasaland) broke away from the so-called "Rhodesian Federation." Salisbury, in retaliation, withdrew its patronage and assistance and what perhaps hurt most, its medical teams. That was in 1964.

Israel was one of the first countries to recognize the young republic and also the first to send over a large medical team. At the time Prime Minister Dr. Ezer Weizman (a British-trained physician) probably appreciated this gesture more than anything else Israel could have done then.

Dr. Banda, now President of Malawi, is a pragmatist and a believer in diplomatic dialogue. His country remains the only black African state to retain full relations with Pretoria, and his conception of solving the Rhodesian conflict is also at loggerheads with all other black African nations, and particularly so with neighbouring Tanzania and Zambia (with which Malawi has reasonably good relations).

Unquestionably in favour of black majority rule in Rhodesia, Dr. Banda also believes that time is required to train the Africans for a take-over if they are to steer clear of economic and political disasters.

He has accomplished some startling achievements in his own country. Self-sufficiency is one of them. One of the poorest countries in minerals in the area, Malawi has a stable economy and balanced books. It has capitalized on its rich soil and relative abundance of water by improving its animal stocks and methods of cultivation.

Seventy-three years of colonial rule and total dependence on their British masters are still bitterly remembered in former Nyasaland, especially so by Dr. Banda. Bitter, too, has been the Malawis' experience with the Arabs whom they knew as slave raiders. One infamous example was M'lotchie, who in the 19th century entrenched himself on the north-western shore of Lake Malawi and ruled over a terror-stricken population.

FRIENDSHIP with Israel has brought technical assistance in agriculture and medicine and help in pilot projects including cotton and tobacco farming and poultry breeding. Malawi's central institute for training in sports is roughly patterned after the Wingate Institute and is directed by an Israeli.

Israel's exports to Malawi increased considerably last year. Koor has a local representative there, but the experts say that the trade flow could be greatly accelerated. Malawi grows prime tea and tobacco. The goods Israel could supply to Malawi are almost unlimited.

(This reporter went shopping for a blazer in Blantyre's fashionable Victoria Avenue and wound up with a made-in-Israel Polgat jacket. The place of manufacture emerged from a tiny label attached below a Marks and Spencer's St. Michael trademark.)

Returning Israelis often ask themselves whether Malawi represents Israel's last foothold on the continent or a foot in the door to a comeback in Africa? This is difficult to answer at this stage.

Landlocked Malawi depends on newly independent Mozambique for a vital rail link to Beira on the Indian Ocean. Mozambique is apparently cooperating with the Russians who have supplied it with arms to suppress unruly tribes.

The Malawis have, at any rate, no intention of playing their relationship with Israel down, says Israel's Ambassador in Lilongwe Shalom Lior. It is one country where Israel's Independence Day was remembered and widely featured in the local press.

li Arabia' ing with Cousteau at 86

reece. — The sole of the sinking of the 16-year-old British began plunges in its mini-submarine mysteriously sunk which went down dur-

000 ton ship, a naval prize in its time for its capacity of 2,500 passengers. Only 21 of the 1,061 persons aboard died in the sea disaster. Miss Mitchell joined Cousteau's expedition team last weekend after reading an appeal he published in the British press.

Apart from walking with the aid of crutches, the British woman had breathing and seasickness problems while making the initially limited descents in Cousteau's bathyscaphe.

Asked what her major interest in the descent is, Miss Mitchell said: "To help get things right for history's sake. But also to retrieve a few personal belongings I left behind in my cabin, No. 237, especially an antique family alarm clock of great sentimental value to me."

The Britannia, whose sister ship, the Titanic, also met tragic fates years earlier, sank under mysterious circumstances on November 21, 1916. Cousteau, who discovered the wreck during an Aegean filming project earlier this year, said a 50-metre hole visible in its side strengthens the favoured argument that a German torpedo was responsible. He rejects the theory that the ship hit a mine.

Built in Belfast in 1914 as a luxury passenger liner, the Britannia was used during the war as a hospital ship. It was heading for Galipoli when it was sunk. (AP)

e of "Which" v which showed that the British buy 80 million anti-perpirants and deodorants a year. For those who've wondered about the difference between anti-perpirant and deodorant, "Which" explains that deodorants contain an antiseptic which either kills bacteria on the skin, or prevents new bacteria which land on the skin after washing from multiplying. An anti-perpirant reduces your rate of sweating through use of different chemicals.

The consumer magazine tested 158 different brands, both aerosols and roll-ons, and found that none kept their users' armpits completely free from the smell of sweat. The users found little to choose between male and female, unless for family ones. In fact, the men seemed to prefer the ones designated for females.

"Which" concluded that washing oneself is the best way to keep smelling good; after that, it's a matter of finding the deodorant or anti-perpirant that suits one best, starting from the cheaper ones, which are not necessarily the worst (or the best) for you.

On the subject of cost, I would point out that not one of the 158 brands tested by "Which" cost over £1 (about IL4). The cheapest aerosol or roll-on sold at Hamashbir was Taya's roll-on at IL28 (no refill on display). And while comparing the price of Helena Rubinstein's Roll-Dry in England is 84 p. (about IL2); in this country (where, after all, it's actually produced), it costs IL28.35 — more than double the price.

Perhaps that's a good reason why we Israelis don't use deodorants as much as we should.

Right-wing daily failing in Jo'burg

By DONALD WOODS

JOHANNESBURG — The "Citizen," South Africa's new English-language daily newspaper launched a month ago by the pro-Nationalist Afrikaner millionaire Louis Luyt, is having a rough passage.

With an estimated loss rate of about $340,000 a month and a considerably lower circulation than originally envisaged, it underwent a change of editors after only 14 publication days.

At midday on September 30, Martha Spring, an Englishman noted for his right-wing views, was still in the Editor's chair. By three o'clock on the same day he had been replaced as Editor and given the token appointment of "Assistant Managing Director."

The "Citizen" was launched, in a blaze of publicity, to fill what Afrikaner Nationalists have long regarded as a need for a conservative English-language newspaper. For many years members of the Nationalist Government have maintained that English-speaking South Africans, being more conservative than their vigorous liberal Press, would support such a newspaper as the "Citizen."

In English-speaking Press circles a suspicion was voiced that Luyt had Nationalist backing, possibly through the Government's Bureau of State Security, and that the real aim was to damage the viability of the two biggest anti-apartheid English-language newspapers, the "Star" (circulation 180,000) and the "Rand Daily Mail" (circulation 150,000). The theory was that even if the "Citizen" ran at a loss, it could, by pulling away only 10 per cent of circulation and advertising revenue from the "Rand Daily Mail," cause considerable damage to this outspoken anti-apartheid paper.

The latest indication is that Luyt is probably footing the entire bill — the annual loss could amount to three million rands ($3,400,000). Enormous expenditure went into the preparation for the launch. Key staff men were hired at large salaries under a three-year contract guarantee, then talented journalists were recruited from the established papers at considerably higher than normal salaries.

More than a year previously, Luyt, who made his fortune out of fertilizer products, had attempted to take over South African Associated Newspapers, which publishes several leading papers including the "Rand Daily Mail," but the bid was thwarted after an outcry in opposition circles. It was following this abortive attempt that Luyt announced his intention to launch the "Citizen."

The results of the launch were unspectacular. A hoped-for initial print order of 250,000 was not attained, owing to technical difficulties, and a hoped-for initial circulation of 180,000, setting round the 100,000 mark was not reached. Its new editor, M.A. Johnson, formerly regarded as the most conservative of all South Africa's English-speaking editors, told me that the present circulation was 75,000. (Onas)

GAMLA: THE NORTHERN MASADA

This week marks the fall of the town of Gamla to the Romans under Titus in 68 CE. SYLVIA MANN describes archaeological finds there.

"GAMALA WAS TAKEN on the thirteenth and fourteenth days of the month of Tishri," records Josephus Flavius in his "Wars of the Jews," book IV, chapter 1. Gamala was one of the Jewish fortresses in the north which defied the Roman army in 68 CE; although valiantly defended, it could not ultimately withstand the combined attack of the fifth, tenth and 15th Roman Josephus describes the town, its position and its defences, very vividly. It was situated upon a rough ridge of a high mountain, with a kind of neck in the middle.... It declines so much downward before as behind, so that it is like a camel, from whence it is so named. There was a wall around it, and a spring of water "within the wall, at the utmost limits of the city." A citadel stood on the highest point — the southern end of the mountain, and the houses were "built on the acclivity, very

Despite 'Josephus' detailed description, Gamala, or Gamla as it is now known, was not finally identified until 1988. Mount Gamla, about 10 kilometres inland from the sea, is a low hill, known as the crow flies from the northeast shore of Lake Kinneret, exactly fits 'Josephus' picture. It stands at the junction of two branches of the Dailot rivulet, and has a high, elongated ridge running north and south, while both

Partly because of a camel's hump, and partly because of the difficulty of access, little archaeological work was done on the site. In 1970, however, Sumayyah Guttman, the veteran archaeologist who has carried out much pioneering work, particularly at Masada on the synagogue at Khirbet Susiya, began a dig there.

Josephus writes how he himself found a conduit bringing water from Nahal Daliot to the city area, and estimated that the city area was 180 dunams, which is very large; he also found a conduit bringing water from Nahal Daliot to the lower town, as well as rock-hewn cisterns in the upper city. Coins dating from the 1st century BCE to the 1st century CE were also found.

Garnala's inhabitants were confident that they could resist any enemy, particularly as they had successfully withstood a seven-month siege by Herod Agrippa's/g's/s men.

But Vannus planned his campaign differently. He was determined to take the city by surprise. He sent a small force of men to dig tunnels under the city walls. When the tunnels reached the city center, the soldiers lit fires. The flames spread quickly, and the city was destroyed. Vannus then entered the city and looted it. He killed many of the people who remained and took the rest captive. He then led them back to his camp at Carna.

But Vespaasian planned his campaign well. He set his troops to build siege camps and fill up earthbanks to neutralize the defences.

THE INGREDIENTS for a successful British soap opera have curiously little to do with the realities of the Great Britain of today, where the welfare state, complete sexual permissiveness and legalized abortion make the wealthy old problems seem comparatively small.

"The Brothers," the new terrestrial which began on Sunday night, relies heavily on fights between the executive suite and the talent of the bar sinister to keep us biting our fingernails. It differs from "The Forsyte Sage," "The One-Drive Line" and "Clayhanger," only in that it is not set nostalgically in some previous decade, when such things as profit and legitimacy were important, but otherwise we have the formula as before. From the word "go" we know the 2nd and 3rd centuries CE; the surrounding stone benches; the passage on the floor, and the railway to the upper level. The comparison between the prayers at Masada and at Gamala is striking—except for the fact that it is difficult to see whether there were the usual dividing pillars at Gamala, a photograph of one might be mistaken for a photograph of the other.

RAMLA MAY NOW be reached in little difficulty, although the distance which must be covered is greater than the bird-flight of 10 kilometres. Starting off from Elin Ursul, take the road northward to Wadi, at the outlet of Wadi el-Munkekh. Then continue beyond Wadi for about seven kilometres, and turn right along a poorly-urfaced road for at least another kilometre, until you come to a road crossing at right angles. Here, turn left; then left again to the ruins of Deir Korah — an abandoned Arab village.

the village would be along the road to the right just before Kural which is 30 kilometres or so past the settlements of Givat Yo'av, H. Al. Nob, Avne Eitan, Ramat Hagahaim and Sha'al, Turn sharp left and go on for some seven kilometres, then turn left

There is a spacious parking lot here, and an observation point from which you can see Wadi Muttal and look down on razor-sharp, blackened Mount Gambia, with the newly-excavated synagogue at its base. If you observe carefully, you can discern an ancient wall from which a tower rises, and the remains of a Roman ramp upon which the battering-rams and the weapons were drawn up to conquer the doomed town. An easy trail closely tracked the Nature Preservation society's workers, leads down to the village's lower town and the excavation site. Be careful to prepare yourself with a sun-hat, sunglasses and, above all, a water bottle; for the deceptively simple downward path, which takes perhaps 20 minutes to descend, will take almost twice as long to clamber up.

At least an hour should be spent examining the dig, trying to trace the ancient ramparts, and generally absorbing the mystic atmosphere generated by sitting in a synagogue where the Zealots were victorious nearly 2,000 years ago; by the proximity of the ruins in which saw the advancing Romans in their glittering array of battle-frenzied men of mammas pushing them back, and gazing down the deep abyss where Jewish fighters, seeing defeat at hand, leaped to their death. □

On the credit side, Hilary Tinsill as Brian's bitchy wife Ann is perfection itself, apart from being very easy on the eyes: she did some wonderful lines when proposing of her mother-in-law's able request to be allowed to visit a more of her grand-children. I hope that Gabrielle Drake as Jill will not disappear from the life of the world, when he gives up being a dilettante, less intellectual to become a money-maker, like the professor in "Major Barbara."

Despite the reservations I have indicated, "The Brothers" holds a very promising of being a transformer, which will embellish F-Sunday nights. It has the advantage of starting at 8:30 p.m., so we can combine it with the "Mavis" on Tuesday.
